

Citizens for Nuclear Technology Awareness (CNTA) will hold their 23rd Annual Edward Teller Lecture and Banquet on Monday, October 20, 2014 at the USCA Convocation Center in Aiken. The lecture is a community event attended by community leaders, CNTA members, local and national business and corporate interests, government and Savannah River Site officials, and elected officials from Georgia and South Carolina.

Our guest speaker this year is award winning documentary filmmaker, Robert Stone. Stone's documentary "Pandora's Promise" debuted at the 2013 Sundance Film Festival. The film chronicles high profile anti-nuclear personalities who became avid supporters of nuclear energy and it has changed the way many people regard the nuclear energy option. The documentary is available for viewing on iTunes and Netflix.

Robert Stone was born in England and educated in the United States. His father was the noted historian Lawrence Stone who chaired the history department at Princeton, where he grew up. He is a graduate of the University of Wisconsin/Madison and has also studied at Sorbonne University in Paris and at Lee Strasberg in New York. His breakthrough and debut film was the Oscar nominated "Radio Bikini" in 1987. His work has been screened at Sundance and dozens of other festivals and televised in many countries throughout the world. While known mostly for his handling of archival material in historical documentaries he has also shot a number of films, and has recently shot and produced several well received documentaries. His work has been co-produced with a wide variety of television companies including PBS, Discovery, Channel Four, BBC, ARTE, ZDF, Court TV and National Geographic. In addition to his work in television, he is the creator of a 24 part semi-interactive permanent installation at the JFK Museum in Boston. He lives in New York with his wife and two sons.

Tickets are $50 per person and can be obtained by contacting the CNTA office by email, cnta@bellsouth.net or by phone, (803) 649-3456. Tickets must be purchased by October 3, 2014.
